Establishment of the Centre for Rajarshi Nalvadi Krishnaraja Wodeyar's Social and Development Studies - framing of statutes thereof -reg

Preamble:

The State Government has sanctioned a grant of Rs. 500 lakshs to institute the above centre.

It is needless to highlight the welfare policies undertaken by Nalvadi Krishnaraja Wodeyar for the people of Mysuru. Though he had to work under British, the developmental projects and people centric welfare polices placed Mysuru in the forefront of development compared to other native States.

The Pro-People policies introduced by him particularly, English education provided an intrinsic strength and enabled many disadvantageous communities to being a step towards mobility. It was revolution and historic decision in providing 50% of Government jobs for Backward Classes. The Mysuru was the first State in South India which had provided social justice.

Not only major programs initiated in the fields of agriculture, irrigation industry, commerce, literature, cultural spheres and facilities extended to Backward Classes including Women and Dalits to have education. Through these programmes, Nalvadi Krishnaraja Wodeyar emerged as revered morning star in South India, a Champion and harbinger as social justice. Sir M. Visveshvarayya, the Dewan under him earned 'Bhartaratna' in the post-independence days, because of the programmes he initiated as the Chief Engineer and Dewan under the patronage of Nalvadi Krishnaraj Wodeyar, all of which would speak for his achievements.

Mahatma Gandhi who closely watched the pro-people welfare activities of the maharaja remarked that "this is my dream Ramarajya" referring to Mysuru and respectably called Nalvadi as "Rajarshi"

Having regard to the historical achievements seen in the regime of Nalvadi Krishnaraja Wodeyar, the University of Mysore has proposed to bring awareness among people in various field by undertaking printing and publishing the speeches of Nalvadi, his letters, writings etc. For the systematic studies in this behalf, the University has proposed to establish the above Centre.
