Proposal for Starting M.A. in International Relations

Course Rationale

M.A. in International Relations(MA,IR) is a two-year specialized Programme, which endeavors to expose students to the wide horizon of information, comprehension and knowledge of International Relations and Global , regional Politics and is designed to acquaint students, with the nuances and intricacies of international policymaking and the vicissitudes of statecraft. Students emerging out of this programme can look forward to career opportunities in Academia (Advanced Research/Internship stints with Think-Tanks), Civil Service (IFS), Media (Electronic and/or Print Journalism), NGOs, Consultancy, Internship with Diplomatic Missions and teachings position in reputed institutions at government and Private level etc.

The course is designed with the view to equip students with conceptual tools necessary to efficaciously comprehend the fundamental forces, processes and actors, militating within the international system. Towards this end, the Course will Endeavour to introduce students to principal theoretical debates and analytical tools, imperative to a fulsome study of International Relations. Both, mainstream theoretical traditions and pertinent critical perspectives are intended to be examined. An abiding goal of this course is to alter the image of the study of theory, which is often disparaged by students, as abstract and outside the purview of the real world.

The objective of the course is to acquaint the students with the concepts, perspectives and general approaches to understanding of contemporary international relations. Also, emphasis will be placed on the evolving dynamics of international relations and the major new actors and new modes of diplomacy in international politics.

The course is designed to cover both theoretical and conceptual aspects of the practice of international organization in general as well as the specificities such as origins, evolution, structures, functions, politics, effectiveness and critiques of selected international organizations. In examining the potential as well as the limitations of international organization, a mix of theoretical, historical, legal and political approaches will be used to understand specific themes.

Some of the university such as JNU, Goa University, Calcutta University and Delhi University are already introduced this course successfully. Since this course has not been introduced in any universities of Karnataka it is proposed to start in Maharaja's College, UOM.

Instruction and Evaluation Methods

The main mode of instruction will be class room lectures and discussions. Class time is expected to be interactive in nature for which students are required to go through the prescribed readings (which will be circulated in advance) before coming for class. Although Primarily based on the prescribed readings, lectures may refer to additional sources as well.

Course Distribution

The course consists of four semesters .Each semester consists Four (4) Hard core Papers and One (1) soft core or as per UGC guidelines. In Final semester a Dissertation counts for Twenty (20) Credits is also part of the course where the students also interface with the dynamics and mechanics of critical research, at an elementary level.

Credits;

The Program provides for an aggregate of Eighty (80) Credits, spanning Twenty (20) Courses, spread across four Semesters, with each Course carrying a uniform Four (04) Credits.

Assessment

Each paper will be valued for 100 marks consisting 30 marks for continues assessments and 70 marks for semesters end exams in final semester for Dissertation 70 marks and 30 marks.
