

History of the Department of Communication & Journalism

The University of Mysore has many “first” to its credit. Education in Journalism is one of these. The Department of Post-Graduate Studies and Research in Journalism was started on August 9, 1972. However, the regular classes were formally inaugurated on September 20, 1972. Thus, the University of Mysore created history by introducing Journalism as a subject of study at the post-graduate level offering M.A. degree.

Dr. Nadig Krishna Murthy, Professor and Head, who is pioneer in Journalism education in India is the founder of the department.

The Government of Karnataka, the University Grants Commission and the University of Mysore have played an important role in establishing the post-graduate department on a strong base. In this regard special mention must be made of Prof. D. Javare Gowda, former Vice-Chancellor and of Mr. D.V. Urs, former Vice-Chancellor.

The Department of Journalism at the Maharaja’s College, Mysore was started in 1951. Journalism was offered as one of the three optional subjects. Very soon this subject attracted a large number of students and gained popularity.

Dr. Nadig Krishna Murthy became the Head of the department in 1953 and strove hard to build the newly established department for more than two decades. Mr. Syed Iqbal Khadri joined Prof. Nadig Krishna Murthy in 1959, as a Lecturer.

That very year, a uniform three-year degree course was introduced in the university, according to the UGC (University Grant Commission) directive. The Bachelor of Arts B.A degree included Journalism as a major/cognate subject.

For nearly 18 years, the department used to publish an English-Kannada monthly as a laboratory journal, the PATRIKODYAMI (the Journalist). Later on the Practical training is imparted in gathering, writing, processing and disseminating news through the Manasagangotri practice journal.

In the earlier days the department derived strength from its collaboration with the School of Journalism, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, U.S.A.

Students from Bangladesh, Nepal, Ethiopia, Afghanistan, Kenya, Nigeria, Mauritius, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Yemen, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Fiji, Sri Lanka,

Uzbekistan, Thailand, and Palestine have graduated here funded by Colombo Plan scholarships, ICCR Exchange Programme, .

Special Lectures

In order to improve the knowledge of students with regard to the practical aspect of the field of Journalism, the post-graduate department arranges lectures by prominent mass communicators and scholars.

A series of special lectures will be arranged every year with the generous help of the university, exclusive of other general lectures covered in the normal course.

The most prominent is the Janmabhoomi Trust Endowment Lecture. Every year an internationally reputed journalist will be invited to deliver this lecture at the university. This is financed by the Janmabhoomi Trust, Bangalore.

The first of these lectures entitled “Journalism as a Factor in Democracy” was delivered by Padma Phushana Tushar Kanti Ghosh, Chief Editor, Amrita Bazar Patrika, Calcutta, on February 3, 1972. The second lecture was delivered by Mr. D.R.Mankekar, former Editor of the Indian Express on September 12, 1974 entitled “An open society and a free press”.

Model Press Conference;

Model Press Conferences are also conducted to give practical training to the students. Persons distinguished in different fields of the public life are invited to address the students of the department.

Plant

Post-graduate students are given practical training in printing and other allied work in the University Printing Press. This press is well-equipped with modern machines.

Practice Journal

A laboratory weekly, the Manasa Gangotri is being published by the post-graduate Journalism department. Students are required to report and write news, articles, reviews, features and editorials for the journal under the supervision and guidance of the teaching staff. This is intended to give them the necessary practical training in the field of active Journalism. The students are also guided to take up freelance Journalism. Their work will also be assessed

Teleprinter News Service

With a view to impart practical training in sub-editing, the post-graduate department has subscribed to the United News Service. News copies are to be edited and headlined by the students under the guidance of the teachers.
